This article develops a framework to examine the co-constitutive nature of performance and politics and to suggest that such a framework is critical to promoting an interdisciplinary approach to understanding our complex political world. It does this by disaggregating the component parts of political performance and suggesting how, once these are made visible, we are able to reflect upon more complex processes of its re-aggregation into our analysis of politics.

Despite increased attention, both theoretical and empirical, to the role of formal intergovernmental organizations in world politics (Abbott and Snidal 1998; Gartzke et al. 2008), few IO scholars have looked directly at the issue of performance. A partial exception is Barnett and Finnemore's (1999, 2004) pathbreaking work, which identifies bureaucratic dysfunction as a key source of ...

Such a history of civic engagement has fomented a performance art tradition that pays special attention to the politics of the body. For those who are denied access to, or for those who voluntarily eschew, traditional political outlets, their own bodies can become a sites of political transformation or contestation.
